BLOCKS PLANS FOR WIDENING HIGHWAY

Plans for widening the highway passing through the Lawndale section south of Colma, commonly called the "bottle neck" received a set-back Wednesday afternoon, with the announcement before the committee having the matter in charge that the Cypress Lawn Cemetery would not join the other cemeteries along the peninsula highway in giving up the land required for the straightening and widening of the road.

This anouncement was made by H. H. Noble, representing the Cypress Lawn Cemetery, and is said to have utterly disrupted the committee's session, a session that had been designated in advance as the "Let's Go" meeting, because every obstacle to the immediate beginning of work on breaking the "bottle neck" had apparently been conquered.

The meeting, held in the City Hall, San Francisco, under the chairmanship of Supervisor Richard J. Welch, had been called to clean up the last few details preliminary to beginning work at once.

There were present representatives of San Francisco, which had voted $150,000 for the work; the Southern Pacific Railroad, which had donated the right-of-way to which the Market Street Railway tracks were to be removed; the Market Street Railway, which had voted $110,000 toward the work; San Mateo county, which had voted $50,000; the State Highway Commission, which had appropriated $250,000 and agreed to start work immediately, and of the six cemeteries along the highway, five of which had already agreed to give the needed land.

"Well, everything's rady to go—" began the chairman, when Mr. Noble arose and delivered his message.

"The Cypress Lawn Cemetery Association will not give the land asked," he said. He explained that the directors did not want to spoil the lake, and that they objected to a dangerous condition that they say will be created in moving the street car tracks from their present location so as to force passengers to cross the highway.

Instead of the land, the Cypress Lawn Cemetery offered a counter proposal, that the street car tracks remain where they are, and that the road be widened at the west side instead of as proposed.

It is said that unrestrained expressions of opinion were quite freely voiced by those present at the meeting. Disgusted at the sudden new obstacle, after months of hard work in getting all factions together, several of thoss present suggested the abandoning of the break-the-bottle-neck plan entirely.

But other counsel prevailed, and on suggestion of E. B. Leavitt of the Southern Pacific, seconded by Supervisor Welch, Noble agreed to call a meeting of the Cypress Lawn Association next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, at their rooms in the Hewes building, Sixth and Market streets, San Francisco.

The entire "Break-the-Bottle-Neck" committee will attend this meeting in a body, and urge the cemetery directors to reconsider their stand. If they succeed, Supervisor Welch said, work can begin at once.

It is sincerely hoped that this matter will be properly adjusted and that the road will be widened in the near future.

FOUR INJURED WHEN AUTOMOBILE SKIDS

Four persons were injured, three of them seriously, when the automobile in which they were riding skidded Saturday night at Mission and Pope streets, San Francisco, and crashed into a telephone pole.

William Kronke, 563 Templeton street, Daly City, sustained a fractured skull and internal injuries. Mrs. Emma Kronke, his mother, sustained a fractured skull, cuts and bruises. Albert Larson, also of 563 Templeton, is suffering from concussion of the brain and possible fractured skull, while Harry Ahlstrom, 178 Henry street, escaped with cuts and bruises.

The condition of the streets following the heavy rain resulted in the skidding of the car and the injury of the occupants.

NEW BANKING HOURS

The Liberty Bank, Daly City's Bank, announces that new banking hours have been established. The bank will be open from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. on all week days except Saturday, when it will be open from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m., for general banking business and safety deposits. Formerly this bank was closed Saturday afternoons, and the new innovation will in all probability be of great benefit to many of the bank's customers.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAM AT GRACE PRESBYTERIAN

The program last Sabbath evening at Grace Presbyterian church was most inspiring and uplifting.

The cornet solo by Mr. Edmund Neederhaus was much appreciated. He was accompanied on the piano by Miss Savage.

Mr. Campbell's vocal solo caused all to say: "Come again. You are always welcome."

Mr. Gifford Teal's vocal solo, "I'm Nearer Home Today Than Perhaps Now I Think," was a real call to higher life.

The offertory, played by Miss Mildred Roof, lifted one's heart into a real spirit of worship.

The program was arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society, Mrs. George Riddell, president.

The subject of the sermon was Help Those Women (Phil. 4-3) Rev. Gatchell said it was a greater benefit to mankind and an honor to motherhood to bring up Samuel than to sit as governor of Texas. Woman's great sphere, setting up an ideal. To preserve purity, to teach love and fellowship. A strong plea was made to the men to help those women to maintain the simple faith in God and the sacredness of the home.

The services next Sunday will be of more than ordinary benefit to the community, as the great lesson of Jesus on the parable of the Ten Virgins will be given. Mrs. Gatchell has been drilling the company and hopes to leave a deep and lasting impression for righteousness. Come and hear and see.

The race around the world begins in the Bible school this Sunday. Mrs. Roof and Mrs. Lewis are the captains of the two parties. Come, get into the race.

The Ladies' Aid held their regular monthly luncheon on Wednesday noon and as usual served an appetizing and satisfying meal to the crowd who availed themselves of this privilege.

The Girls' Club met with Mrs. Gatchell at the Manse on Tuesday evening and a very interesting and profitable time was had.

The boys' athletic bunch met Wednesday afternoon and enjoyed an hour's real sport.

Subject of sermon next Sabbath evening at 7:30, "What Brand of Religion Do You Carry?" Come out.

THE GOLDEN GATE OUTLOOK

(Extract from the Church Advocate of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.)

As I climb the hill about three blocks from the mission church which I have been supplying for some weeks, I can see far across the wide expanse of the Pacific ocean, and there to my right is the beauty of the ocean and the glory of this mighty city which is set on a hill, San Francisco. It is the far famed Golden Gate of this mighty ocean.

No one has ever looked upon this wonder of the deep, believing in the everlasting God, but has come away with a deeper impression and a more enduring faith in the omnipotent Father.

At sunset, as one looks, is seen the path of gold reaching from one's very feet out and out until it seems the beautiful sheen kisses the very eyebrow of the orb of day. Oh, what a pathway of gold, and as one stands in holy wonder, he is led to think "and the path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day," and then as you turn for a moment, looking back over the hill path over which you have come, you are again reminded, "He that would ascend the hill of the Lord must have clean hands and a pure heart," and again, who shall stand in His holy place.

And again as you look at the tossing, rolling waters of the great ocean, you are led to remember that the sea shall give up its dead and the buried secrets of the centuries of these mysterious waters shall be made manifest some of these days, and as you meditate a holy awe comes over you.

Yes, and as you look again, this path of gold seems to be quiet and restful, though the waters on either side may be tossing and uneasy, and then as you glance at the sun at the end of the path, you remember: "I will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is staved on Thee."

Just another look and as the deep and lasting emotions fill the soul, you see that the nearer end of the path, the sun, the brighter shines the path, and is it not so with the Son of Righteousness, Jesus Christ, King of Kings and Lord of Lords?

The more perfectly your vision comes to Him, the more real and beautiful the path glows and shines amidst the tossing billows and troubles of this old world, and you catch yourself singing with the poet, "The nearer I reach the end of time, the sweeter Thou art to me."

Then I grapple with myself, for I find myself standing gazing at Mt. Nebo, in far off land, and with the author of that old song I am humming, "Could we but climb where Moses stood and view the landscape o'er, not Jordon's stream nor death's cold flood would fright us from the shore."

Then the eyes are dimmed with tears, for the soul can no longer hold its pent up emotion, and then as you clear the vision for one more glance, the mighty orb sinks quietly into the embrace of the waves, like a tired child into its mother's arms for sleep, and you turn homeward saying: "And the place that now knows us shall shortly know us no more." But as I wind my way back down the hill, like the psalmist, my soul sings: "I am coming, Lord, coming now to Thee; wash me, cleanse me in the blood that flows on Calvary."

Yours for the upward look.

NEW DEPARTMENT FOR RADIO 'FANS'

It is the desire of the publisher of Daly City Record to furnish the subscribers and patrons of this paper with all the live news it is possible to secure, as well as features to please the taste of every member of the family.

For some time past articles on radio construction and theory have been published in this paper. Now the Record is pleased to announce the opening of an entirely new department, the radio column.

The principal purpose of the new column will be to answer any questions as to construction of radio equipment of any kind, or any queries on theory of radio, etc.

The radio editor will welcome any suggestions or articles on radio, no matter whether it be a soldering kink or a detailed description of a piezo-electric crystal-controlled transmitter using a 50 watt bottle master oscillator, driving a quarter killowatt amplifier tube and driven by a crystal controlled 5 watter. Acknowledgment will be made of all articles.

The radio editor is Marc Worst, who has been a member of the Record staff for the past eight months. Mr. Worst has made radio his hobby for the past nine years, having served in the capacity of president in one radio club, and as a minor officer in others. He is studying radio engineering at college, and can very capably handle this new addition to the features provided by the Record.

You can feel perfect confidence in all answers, as any queries that go over his head (and they do come that way sometimes) will be referred to other of his older brother engineers, and threshed out until the answer is right.

All questions should be at the office of the Daly City Record, 6500 Mission street, Daly City, not later than Wednesday noon, to insure the publication of the answer in the current issue. Questions received later than that time will probably not appear until the following week.

All questions not answered in the column will be answered by mail during the week.

All right, shoot 'em in fast and hot. Remember, questions, suggestions, articles, all of them. Also, please omit the phony names and anonymous. Yours is good enough. We want to give you the credit, not I. M. Dumb or G. Ridleak, V. T.

DALY CITY WOMAN IS DEPUTY CORONER

Mrs. Luella D. Pepper, manager of W. C. Lasswell & Company, the Daly City morticians, has been appointed deputy coroner in charge of Daly City and Colma districts, it has been announced by Coroner W. A. Brooke.

Mrs. Pepper succeeds her sister, Mrs. Winifred C. Lasswell-Leonetti, who died recently following an attack of influenza. She is well qualified to fill the vacancy, having been Mrs. Lasswell's understudy for years prior to Mrs. Lasswell's death. Upon the request of Coroner Brooke, Mrs. Pepper assumed temporary charge of the deputy coroner's work immediately following Mrs. Lasswells' death, and now the appointement has been made permanent.

THISTLES DEFEAT MERCURY

In spite of the bad weather, the Thistles and the Mercurys played an interesting soccer game on the Jefferson high school grounds last Sunday, the Thistles winning by a 2 to 0 score. The Thistles were led by Harry Roberts, who is famed as a "mudder" of the first order. The members of the losing team played good defensive soccer, but failed to show finish in their attacks.

GRAND JURY REPORT CRITICISES HOSPITAL

The San Mateo county grand jury of 1925-1926, having completed its investigations into the affairs of county government, on Monday filed its report with Superior Judge George H. Buck at Redwood City and was discharged. In discharging the jurors, Judge Buck took occasion to highly commend them for their efforts and for the manner in which they carried out their deliberations.

The major portion of the grand jury's report was given to recommendations regarding the Community hospital at Beresford. This report showed that despite the fact that an expert had been employed to manage the institution, its expenses last year amounted to $90,313.68, while its revenues amounted to only $14,507.74, leaving a deficit of $76,805.94 to be paid by the taxpayers of the county.

The report further showed that the amount of uncollected bills still outstanding against patients and former patients now amounts to $16,245.38. Some method of collecting accounts should be installed, the report declared.

A recommendation that as soon as the new nurses' home is completed a ward for the care of contageous diseases be built in the hospital, and that a large sign be installed on the highway, showing the direction to the hospital, was made. This sign would be of particular benefit in emergency cases, the report stated.

The jury's report recommended that a new fence and new buildings be constructed at the county poor farm on the San Mateo-Half Moon Bay road. The recommendation was that the new buildings be of only one story.

Two new cars for the sheriff's office were recommended, and the report of the audit of the county books by C. E. Piatt was included.

The jury also recommended that the coroner look into the matter of having all deputy coroners equipped with proper and respectable conveyances for carrying the dead. At this time this condition does not exist throughout the entire county, the jury's report claims.

LECTURES SCHEDULED AT HOLY ANGELS CHURCH

The Rev. P. J. Diamond of the Salesian order will preach a course of Lenten lectures on the Wednesday evenings of Lent, at the Church of the Holy Angels, Cloma. Services will begin at 7:30. The pastor, the Rev. C. J. Bertola, hopes his parishoners will avail themselves of this opportunity to sanctify the Holy season and receive the blessings that Easter will bring them.

The following are the arguments to be treated:

Ash Wednesday, February 17—"Nothing is Sure But Insurance."

Wednesday, February 24—"Insurance Before, Not When the Fire Starts."

Wednesday, March 3—"Furniture, House, Liabilities. Are You Protected? Insure."

Wednesday, March 10—"Property Values Have Increased. Have You Increased Your Insurance?"

Wednesday, March 17—"Insurance Service: Best Companies, Maximum Service, Minimum Cost."

Wednesday, March 31—"Be Thrifty. Buy Your Own Home."

Friday, April 2—"Real Estate Purchased and Insured."

MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION MEETING ON WEDNESDAY

The Merchants' Association meeting held last Wednesday evening was well attended. The Castro street tunnel project was discussed as showing the power that a club like the Castro Improvement Association might exert.

President H. Fellows announced the release of a moving picture of San Mateo county throughout the East. The premier showing was given in Burlingame last month. The production of this picture was engineered by the Chronicle, various organizations throughout the county contributing to it. The city trustees of Daly City and the Merchant's Association paid Daly City' share.

Adds Five Miles to Highway

With the completion of grading work on the new Bay Shore highway between South San Francisco and Broadway, Burlingame, another step has been taken in the "breaking of the bottle neck." The grading work on the five mile stretch of highway was completed Tuesday by the contractor, according to a report filed with the highway commission.

PERMIT IS REQUESTED IN SAN CARLOS PORT PROJECT

With all necessary properties purchased and practically every obstacle removed, the San Francisco Bay Terminals Company is ready to start work on its immense development program west of Belmont, and has applied to the United States engineer's office for a permit to remove by dredging approximately 15,000,000 cubic yards of material from a strip four miles long and 500 feet wide, starting at the bay shore and ending near the state highway at Belmont.

The company's application is now in the hands of District Engineer John W. N. Shultz, San Francisco, and objectors to the same are requested to file their protests at once. Should no protests be filed within a reasonable length of time, it is believed that the permit will be granted and work will start immediately thereafter.

According to Charles H. Davies of the Terminal Company, the land for the big development has been purchased outright, and practically all obstacles in the path of immediate activity have been removed.

The present plans call for the dredging of a channel 500 feet wide and 30 feet deep from the bay shore to within a short distance of Belmont, with tributaries of uniform length and depth shooting out on both sides. The Belmont side will be deevloped first, according to Davies.

As hte big project develops, Davies states that a 50 acre tract of land, east of the highway and right at Belmont, will be made into a residential park, which will be supplied with water by the Terminals Company. This water system is being planned for the entire district between San Carlos and Beresford.

ALBERIAN INSTITUTE INSTALLS OFFICERS

Last Wednesday evening the newly elected officers of Alberian Institute No. 93 of the Young Ladies' Institute were formally installed with elaborate ceremonies at Corpus Christi Hall, 80 Santa Rosa avenue, Mrs. Beth Sullivan, the grand first vice-president and the deputy in charge of the district in which Alberian Institute is located, being in charge of the installation ceremonies.

Following are the new officers: President, Rose Drago; First Vice-President, Mildred Ward; Second Vice-President, Jenny Stephen; Marshal, Maud Everson; Inside Sentinel, Adele Burns; Outside Sentinel, Emily Serrano; Recording Secretary, Olivia Leonardini; Treasurer, Madeleine Cotter; Trustees, Sally Francis, Asunta Drago, M. Corcoran and A. Leonardini; Organist, Emma Schaetz. Miss Alice Clancy, who was queen at last year's carnival at the Civic Auditorium of the Young Men's and Young Ladies' Institutes, is the past president. The Rev. Father P. J. Diamond, pastor of the Corpus Christi church, is the chaplain.

Alberian Institute has been quite active since the first of the year, and the members are looking forward to many social functions during the year, especially after Lent.

EXCELSIOR GIRLS WIN HOOP TITLE

Seven girls, all under 16 years of age, of the Excelsior district, are exceedingly proud these days because they have succeeded in bringing to that section the playground basketball championship of San Francisco. These members of the Excelsior Playground basketball team, won the title recently by defeating the winners of two other sections of play, into which all playgrounds had been divided.

Their final opponent was the James Lick Playground sextet, the score of this contest being 24 to 8. In the previous game they bested the Hamilton Playground team, 20 to 14. Previously they had won five tilts over the playground teams of their own section.

In recognition of this feat the Playground Commission has decided to present each of the players with a silver basketball.

Miss Alice Clancy, director at Excelsior Playgrounds, coached the team to victory.

Levy Heavy Tax on Bill Boards

The San Mateo city council has adopted an ordinance requiring all persons or firms engaged in putting up signs, sign painting and bill posting to pay a city license tax of $100 a year and 25 cents for each square foot of surface area on each poster or sign.

SUPERVISORS MAKE PLEA FOR BAY SHORE

At the meeting of the board of supervisors of San Mateo county at Redwood City on Monday, a resolution asking that the Bay Shore highway, between San Francisco and San Jose, be included among the primary roads of the state was ordered drawn up by District Attorney Franklin Swart. The resolution will be sent to the California Highway Commission, together with similar resolutions recently adopted by the San Francisco Down Town Association and the San Francisco board of supervisors. T. P. Andrews of the Down Town Association was present at the meeting and asked that such a resolution be adopted.

That the new proposed county soft drink ordinance prepared by District Attorney Swart would be adopted with the exception of a clause covering all night restaurants which dispense soft drinks, was indicated at the session of the board.

Supervisor Thompson protested against three features of the proposed ordinance, which he declared would work a hardship on proprietors of some of the soft drink establishments in the county.

A budget plan for the formation of the San Mateo county health board was presented by Walter M. Dickie, secretary of the California State Board of Health. The plan follows: Salaries—Health officer, $3,600; nurse, $1,800; two sanitary inspectors, $3,600; clerk, $1,200; laboratory, $1,800. Traveling expense—Health officer, $900; nurse, $900; sanitary inspectors, $1,800; incidental expenses, $720. The total expense of the board would be $16,320. Of this amount the International Health Board would contribute $2,500, the State Board of Health $2,500 and the county the remaining $11,320. The matter was continued for two weeks.

County Engineer Kneese presented plans and specifications for the new guard rails along a mile section of the Half Moon Bay road. The plans and specifications call for two types of rail. The board instructed the clerk to ask for bid on both types, the bids to be opened March 1.

To insure an ample water supply for the county relief home, County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese was instructed to write to the Spring Valley Water Company, asking it to tap the relief home pipe system.

City Manager Weissgerber of San Mateo called attention to the type of globes now being used in the Homestead district for street illumination. He stated that the lights were 250 watt power as compared with the normal 100 watt lights used in other districts, and he believed that the residents of that section should be taxed for part of the power used. The matter was referred to Supervisor Rosalie Brown.

LEADER OF ROBBER GANG IS CAPTURED

Believed to be the leader of a gang of burglars which has looted a number of Burlingame and San Mateo homes during the past few weeks, Thomas Mahoney, of 330 Third street, San Francisco, was arrested in San Francisco last week.

Mahoney was arrested as he attempted to pawn jewelry taken last week from the residence of Leon Dentraygues, at Burlingame. A portion of the loot taken there and valued at $100 was recovered at the time of his arrest.

Thus far Mahoney has refused to talk, other than to say that the loot was given him to pawn by a pal named "Blackie." It is believed that Maloney is a member of a gang that have been perpetrating the numerous robberies lately on the peninsula, and with his capture it is hoped the other members will be apprehended.

HOSPITAL HEAD RESIGNS

Intimating that her failure to be a good politician was responsible for charges of general inefficiency being preferred against her, Miss Genevieve Roberts, head of the Community hospital at Beresford, has acceded to the wishes of the hospital advisory committee and tendered her resignation. But before retiring from office, she declared, she would demand that the grand jury appoint an auditor to make a thorough examination of the financial accounts of the institution, so she could prove to her superiors that her management from a financial viewpoint merited no criticism.

Head Appointed to School Board

F. N. Head, shoe merchant of Burlingame, has been appointed a member of the board of trustees of the Burlingame school district by County Superintendent of Schools Pansy J. Abbott.

RADIO

Action, Stability in Five-Tube Set

Receiver Using Basket-Weave Coil Mounted Behind Condensers.

By CAPT. P. V. O'ROURKE
in Radio World.

The standard five-tube tuned RF set is shown in the diagram. The receiver uses basket-weave coils that are mounted behind the tuning condensers. This introduces an action in the circuit which tends toward stability. Unless this were done the tubes on the radio side would be uncontrollable.

As a further check upon disastrous action by the radio amplifying tubes the rheostat controlling the two RF tubes may be varied. The greater the resistance of the rheostat in the circuit, the less brightly the tube burns and the less oscillation.

Fits On a 7 by 18 Inch Panel.

The set may be constructed on a 7 by 18 inch panel. A convenient method of assembly is to use a socket shelf. There is just enough room for the coils behind the condensers. Angle irons are used to secure the coils to the socket shelf. Although called irons, they are most commonly brass. A tubing is inserted through one of the apertures caused by the method of winding a basket-weave coil. This aperture formerly was occupied by a dowel stick or other rod of the winding form. Inside this tubing a long machine screw is placed, with thread toward the condenser, so that a nut may be affixed at that end, to clamp the screw down upon the brass angle. The other end of the angle is affixed to the socket shelf. Usually one angle, bent like an L, with a short horizontal plane as the base, is sufficient for each coil.

The Coils.

The inductances are alike in construction. The primaries have eight turns and the secondaries have 56 turns. The wire is No. 24 enameled silk covered. The form diameter is three and one-half inches. Usually there are 15 rods on which the wire is wound, these constituting the form.

The secondary is wound for 24 turns, then the primary wire is picked up and wound along with it, side by side, for eight turns. The primary winding being terminated then, the rest of the secondary (25 more turns) is put on. The small primary is used as a further aid in obtaining a receiver that will not cause troublesome oscillations.

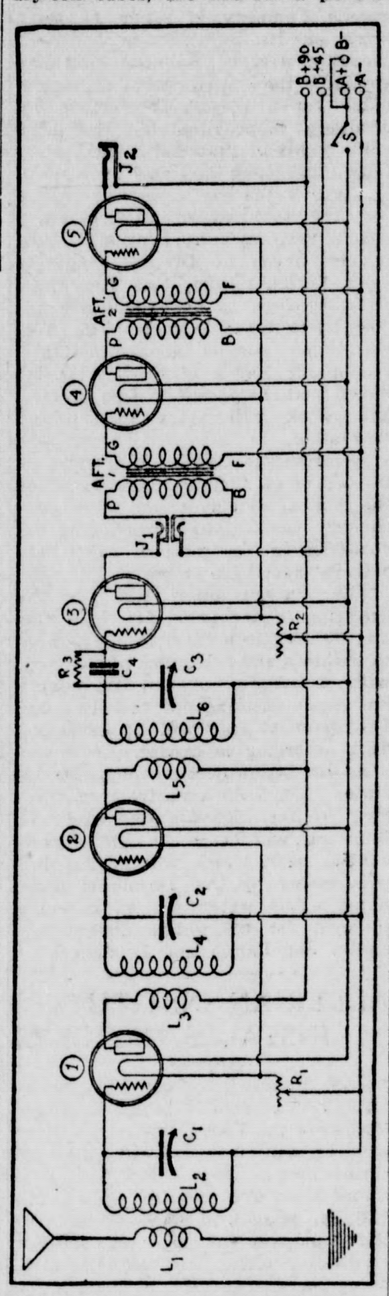
The set, made under these directions, with .00035 mfd. tuning condensers, will tune approximately in step. One factor that tends to operate against this is the added capacity in the first radio transformer, L1L2, due to the aerial-ground system. Thus C1 might tune with readings a little lower than those of the other condensers. To get away from this four turns may be removed from the secondary of the first radio transformer, or, in the actual winding, the number of turns might be made four fewer than that on the other secondaries (i. e., 52 instead of 56).

The circuit enables one to use earphones at the detector output, but the jack providing for this purpose, J1, is to facilitate the tuning in of distant stations, and not for general earphone reception. On that account the rheostat that controls three tubes—the detector and two audio—has no auxiliary switching arrangement. That is, when the detector tube is lighted the audio tubes must be lighted—otherwise there would be something wrong with the wiring, if the diagram were the guide. J2 is for insertion of the plug to which the speaker cords are attached.

The circuit comprises two stages of tuned radio-frequency amplification, tube detector and two transformer-coupled stages of audio-frequency amplification.

The Tubes.

The tubes should be 201A, operated from a six-volt storage battery, with 45 volts or less of B battery on the detector plate and 90 on the RF and audio amplifier plates. The set will operate fairly well on dry-cell tubes, such as the 199 type, but the greater volume and amplification from the large tubes make it well worth while to spend the extra amount of money. Except with some types of superheterodynes, the small tubes, or any dry-cell tubes, are not for a permanent set, because in time the radio user goes over to the five-volt tubes, because of their more satisfying service.



Circuit Diagram of Standard Five-Tube Tuned RF Set.

The following parts will be needed:

Three radio-frequency transformers, basket-weave (L1L2, L3L4, L5L6).

Three .00035 mfd. variable condensers, C1, C2, C3.

One 7 by 18 inch panel.

One 2½ by 17 inch socket shelf, with five sockets.

Two ten-ohm rheostats.

One double-circuit jack, J1.

One single-circuit jack, J2.

One 2 meg. grid leak.

One .00025 mfd. grid condenser.

Two audio-frequency transformers.

Three four-inch dials.

Three dial pointers.

One A battery switch.

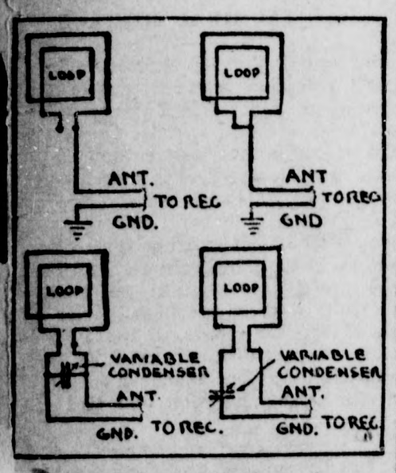
To Use Loop Aerial

To hook a loop aerial in an ordinary five-tube set, disconnect the primary and secondary of the first RFT transformer and shunt the loop across the variable condenser which originally tuned the RFT.

How to Connect Loop to Your Receiver Set

A loop antenna consists of a number of turns of wire arranged on a wooden framework of diamond or square shape.

One advantage of a loop antenna is the fact that it has directional qualities or will receive a signal from one direction with greater strength than from another. Also, in rotating the loop to help in selecting the station one wants to listen to, this kind of an antenna may at times aid in reducing interference from undesired stations or from static.



Methods of Connecting Loop Antenna to Receiver Set.

The extreme disadvantage of a loop antenna, however, is that with the gain of directional quality and possible selectivity, the overall received signal strength from a given station is usually very much reduced requiring a receiver of extreme sensitivity, and possibly instability, if far-distant stations are to be received.

The drawing illustrates four different methods of connecting loop antennas to a radio receiver set. It will be often found that by using either of the methods shown here satisfactory reception of local and semi-distant broadcasting stations up to possibly 200 to 500 miles can be had.

When using a loop with neutrodyne radio receivers, it is extremely desirable that the loop be placed from 6 feet to 10 feet away from the receiver to eliminate possible interference with one another. Results with a loop can probably be equaled if not excelled by using about 20 feet of wire strung around the picture molding, making up a simple indoor antenna.—Cleveland News.

Ohm and Megohm

The meaning of the terms ohm and megohm often is misinterpreted by the radio fan. However, they both are electrical units of resistance. The ohm is the fundamental unit and is the amount of opposition to the flow of an electric current which will cause the current to drop one volt when forced through at one ampere. As the term implies, a megohm is 1,000,000 ohms.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

"It's a Privilege to Live in California."

A. E. Miot, secretary of the Tulare County Board of Trade, at Visalia, reporting to his directors in the annual meeting recently held, announced partial figures of the recent farm survey conducted in that county, as well as elsewhere, by the federal bureau of the census, which indicates the steady development of farm lands even beyond the general conclusions. The total number of farms now listed in Tulare county, according to these figures, is 7,105, which represents an increase of 734 over the figures compiled from the federal census of 1920.

California is preparing 372 persons handicapped by physical disability for new vocations to which they are suited, it was announced by I. W. Kibby, chief of the rehabilitation bureau, state department of education. This total, Kibby said, does not include 89 persons recently forced to discontinue training temporarily because of illness. The state bureau's work is distinct from rehabilitation of former service men and designed to provide new occupations for persons disabled through illness or industrial accidents.

At the meeting of the directors of the Petaluma Co-operative Creamery company at Petaluma, Sonoma county, it was voted to give a bonus of 1¾ cents per pound on all butterfat delivered by members during the past six months and to pay a 4 per cent dividend on shares held by the stockholders of the company. The combined bonus and dividend means that the company is distributing among its stockholders or dairymen $14,000.

A marked revival of activity on the part of the Stanislaus-Merced National Farm Loan association was shown in reports at the annual meeting of the organization held in Turlock recently. The association was formed in 1917 and from then until September 3, 1925, loans totaling $150,000 were secured. From the latter date, when the management was reorganized, until January 1 last, the volume of loans was increased by more than $80,000.

Confronted by a prospective labor shortage which threatens to seriously handicap summer and fall harvests of the San Joaquin valley, representatives of farm bureaus, chambers of commerce and allied interests of the agricultural industry of seven counties in session at Fresno recently, took steps preliminary to the organization of an agency which will collect and distribute farm labor throughout seven counties.

Where bands of wild horses once ranged, and where elk and antelope roamed unmolested in amazing numbers three-quarters of a century ago, Selma, Fresno county, business men now quest for the prizes of modern civilization, their children throng the schools and their industries, of which there was no trace, have in the lapse of less than a lifetime builded a young, prosperous and promising city.

Applications for a water supply for two large Superior California projects were filed with the state division of water rights during the month of December. The largest were those of the Feather River Power company, which concern filed three applications for water from tributaries to the North Fork of the Feather river, in Plumas county. The project calls for an expenditure of $7,700,000.

A monster celebration, in which western Sonoma county, and particularly the Bodega section, will join, will feature the completion of the permanent highway from Bodega Corners to Jenner, at the mouth of the Russian river. The seventy-eighth anniversary of gold discovery on January 24, brings to mind the part that agriculture has played in the history of Coloma, El Dorado county, during the past seventy-six years. Gold was discovered here in 1848 and during the following years the pioneers arrived here and in the Sierra Nevada foothills by the thousands to seek it. All, at first, were eager only for gold, but later some turned aside for farming. In 1850 seven fruit farms were started here and fruit farming has flourished ever since, while mining became a lost industry.

"Hard-Boiled" Captain Augur

CAPT. JOHN AUGUR was a "hard-boiled" pirate. There was no doubt of that in the minds of any of the good folk who flocked to see his execution in the town of Providence in the Bahama islands. They had seen other freebooters ascend the gallow's steps, and there make confession of repentance for their sins. But not so with Captain Augur. He died as he had lived, "a wicked and perverse person," and his last words were words of defiance.

Captain Augur's early history is shrouded in mystery. But he flourished some time in the early Eighteenth century, for in 1718 we find him accepting a royal pardon for his misdeeds and impressing Gov. Woodes Rogers of the Bahamas so favorably that the governor placed him in command of a sloop with a commission to trade among the islands. He might have proved worthy of the trust had not temptation fallen in his way.

One morning he sighted two sloops whose cargo promised rich booty, and the captain forgot all his good intentions to go straight. A shot across their bows stopped the merchantmen, and when a little later they proceeded on their way they were lighter by some 500 pounds sterling in money and goods. Then Captain Augur set sail for Hispaniola, there to join the other "brethren of the coast."

But a sudden hurricane drove his ship back to the Bahamas and wrecked it on a little wooded island. In the meantime the governor had learned how his trust had been betrayed and sent out an armed sloop to hunt for the pirate band. Having discovered them on the island, the captain of the sloop by fair promises lured eleven of the marooned pirates to come aboard. Then he took them back to Providence where Governor Rogers with fine irony convened a court of lately converted pirates to try them.

The result was a foregone conclusion. The judicial pirates were only too anxious to demonstrate their reestablishment in the ranks of the respectable. So they quickly sentenced the eleven to be hanged. On the gallow's platform the condemned men reproached their turn-coat brethren for allowing their old comrades to be hanged and urged them to come to their rescue. Their only reply was that "it was their business to turn their minds to another world and sincerely repent their wickedness in this."

Such cant irritated Captain Augur, the hard-boiled. "Yes," he roared, "I do repent heartily. I repent I have not done more mischief and that we did not cut the throats of them that took us, and I am extremely sorry that you all aren't hanged as well as we." The rope cut short such sinful philosophy.

From Pugilism to Piracy

PUGILISM was not so lucrative a profession in the old days as it is in these modern times. Which may account for the fact that its followers occasionally forsook the squared circle for a wider circle of activity on the high seas. Perhaps the most famous of these was William Fly, of whom we first hear as the boatswain on the good ship Elizabeth sailing from Bristol, England, in 1726.

There was a mutiny, headed by the boatswain, and the crew tossed the captain overboard and killed all of the officers except the surgeon. Then they unanimously elected Fly captain and set out in search of ships to plunder. Their first prize was the John and Hannah taken off the coast of North Carolina, followed soon afterwards by the capture of the John and Betty.

Then Captain Fly headed his piratical craft into northern waters and also into disaster. Off the Newfoundland banks they overhauled a whaler, but by the strategy of the whaler's captain the pirate leader and most of his men were made prisoners. They were carried in chains to Massachusetts, and on July 4, 1726, tried in Boston.

Justice was swift in these days, and on July 16 Fly and his men were executed. Justice was also severe—from the point of view of the pirates, at least—for in addition to being hanged they were forced to listen to long harangues on the error of their ways by preachers famous for their "hanging sermons" for condemned pirates. One of the most noted of these was Rev. Cotton Mather, among whose sermons has been preserved one preached in 1704 called "A Brief Discourse Occasioned by a Tragical Spectacle of a Number of Miserables Under Sentence of Death for Piracy."

Captain Fly, however, seems to have been a particularly hardened sinner for he refused to go to church just before the hanging. Moreover, he conducted himself with great bravado on the way to the gallows. He jumped briskly into the cart holding a bouquet of flowers, bedecked with ribbons—a decorative scheme much in favor among the pugilists of his day—and took his last ride thus, smiling and bowing as though he were a hero and his a triumphal procession.

They tell the story of another ex-prize fighter-pirate, Dennis McCarthy, hanged at New Providence, Bahama, in 1718. He also appeared on the gallows adorned with gay-colored ribbons. "My friends have often in jest declared that I would die in my shoes," he proclaimed. "See, I make them liars." Saying which he kicked off his shoes and died without them.

Old Irony of Fate is still on the job. A Texas soldier of fortune of Mexican ancestry, Jesus Trejo of San Antonio, after being mixed up in several Latin-American revolutions without getting a scratch, although once sentenced to be shot, died the other day from injuries received through falling into a post hole.

Criminal lawyers are becoming more resourceful every day. One in Chicago defended a bootlegger client by declaring that selling good whisky at reasonable prices was "sufficiently meritorious in these trying days to warrant mitigation of sentence." The sentenec was mitigated to sixty days.

Federal Judge Thomas has awarded the government a judgment for a million dollars against Gerald Chapman, mail bandit and condemned murderer, who wants to serve a previous sentence of twenty-five years before being hanged. He will now probably want time to earn a million dollars to pay Uncle Sam.

Count Otari, brother-in-law of the Emperor of Japan, took part in the recent dedication of a $250,000 Buddhist temple at Los Angeles. Such an impressive edifice should be almost sufficient to make the religion of Gautama fashionable on the west coast.

A break in crude rubber a few days ago brought the price down to 77 cents, as against $1.10 a few weeks ago and 36 cents a year ago. Rubber prices, like rubber itself, are liable to break when stretched too far.

A. W. Trenholm of St. Paul, vice-president of the Omaha railroad, who began as a water-boy on a section gang at the age of 10, has just retired at the age of 67, hale and hearty. His exceptional physical condition is probably due to the fact that he never wasted his energies in the strenuous grind of a vacation. He never had one in his fifty-seven years of service.

All surgeons of the famous Mayo clinic at Rochester have been furnished life insurance as a gift from the institution. With all their skill, these eminent disciples of Galen can not keep one another from shuffling off the mortal coil occasionally.

In Germany it is not permissible to bestow a family name upon a child as a given name, hence they have no names such as Hindenburg, Schultz, Mozart, Schmidt and the like. A similar rule in this country would have saved us from a Grover Cleveland Bergdoll.

POET WOULD GIVE IMPOLITE TELEPHONE USERS THE GATE

Writing in a recent issue of Printers' Ink, Strickland, Gillilan, poet and humorist, says that if he were a business man—which he is not—the first person that he would fire would be the fellow who answers a telephone call with a surly "Hello."

Mr. Gillilan points out that many firms do not realize how much business they lose as a result of gruff replies to polite questions made over the telephone. The customer who feels that he has annoyed a firm by attempting to deal with it will cease to be a customer, while, on the other hand, there is a way of putting a warm welcome into the telephone-answering voice so as to make the customer feel glad that he has called. The voice that answers the telephone call may belong simply to an employe, but to the caller it is the voice of the firm.

FAILURE TO SIGNAL CAUSES ACCIDENTS

An increase in minor accidents during the winter months is directly traceable to the failure of many motorists to give the proper arm signals, according to the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association, which says that the failure to signal can be traced in part to the desire for winter comfort through closed windows in the car.

"Signals are necessary to let the car behind know the intention of the driver ahead," the chairman of the public safety committee declared in a recent interview. "They are intended for the safety and protection not only of the occupants of the car behind, but also of the car operated by the driver who gives the signal.

"Then, too, many motorists do not seem to have any idea of how to give signals. Too many hands are merely draped languidly outside the car, hanging limply like a piece of wet macaroni. Giving signals properly will prevent accident to your own car and save the brakes and temper of the motorist behind you."

COLLEGE WILL PURCHASE HIGH SCHOOL PLANT

The board of trustees of the San Mateo Junior College district were instructed to commence necessary proceedings to purchase the San Mateo high school plant for a junior college, and the San Mateo Union high school trustees were authorized to sell the San Mateo high school plant to the Junior College for $295,000, and to purchase another site and erect a high school on that site, at the meeting of the electors of the district held Tuesday night.

The trustees were instructed to place the bond election at $600,000. It was stated that if the election was called at an early date, the property could be purchased and the new school built and ready for occupancy by September, 1927.

COURT HEARS MOST OF CASES BY WIRE

There is one court room in the United States where lawyers—if they are admitted—have little or nothing to say. That is the court room of Judge David Leahy, of Wichita, Kansas. He is judge of the "small debtor's court," which was established by act of the last legislature.

Judge Leahy tries most of his cases by telephone. When he wants testimony in a case before him, he rings up and obtains it, the testimony being incorporated in the court records and used as the basis for a decision. After securing all the testimony, he mails his decision to the principals. Only persons whose controversy involves the sum of $20 or less are admitted to the court. Judge Leahy himself serves without compensation and lawyers are barred from admission, except as spectators.

Liquor Violator Gets Six Months

Joe Garfoli, of Redwood City, who was arrested several weeks ago by federal prohibition agents, charged with illegal possession of liquor, has been sentenced to six months in the county jail, following his plea of guilty.

ELECTRIC WINDER ENDS CLOCK CRANKING JOB

For seventy-eight years Wall Street has been taking its time from the old-fashioned clock in the tower of Trinity church. One day not many weeks ago the clock stopped, and inquiring brokers learned that their favorite time-piece was to be old-fashioned no more. Time was to pause long enough to permit installation of an electric winding system. Under the old hand-run method it took more than three hours to wind the clock. The electric system operates mechanically, and nobody has to climb the tower to "crank" the clock.

NEGRO SEES GHOST IN REX BEACH CAMP

Mose, the giant negro who plays the part of the leader of a gang in the Rex Beach production, "The Iron Trail," which will be at the Daly Theatre tomorrow (Saturday), went on a "spirit strike" while the company was located in the deserted Alaskan village where the mining scenes were made, and it took all of the persuasive power of R. William Neill, director, to keep him from returning to the United States and leaving the company without a "bad" black man.

Mose insisted that there was a ghost in the camp and in spite of all arguments kept his candle burning all night during the rest of his stay.

At 4 o'clock one morning, the company was aroused by the shouts of Mose, who kept repeating, "Oh, Lordy, Lordy, save me."

Investigation disclosed the fact that the cook, in a white apron and with a towel tied over his head, had been trying to find his assistant to start making breakfast, and had gotten into Mose's room by mistake. But Mose still instists that this was not the case and that a real, honest-to-goodness ghost had been trying to "get him."

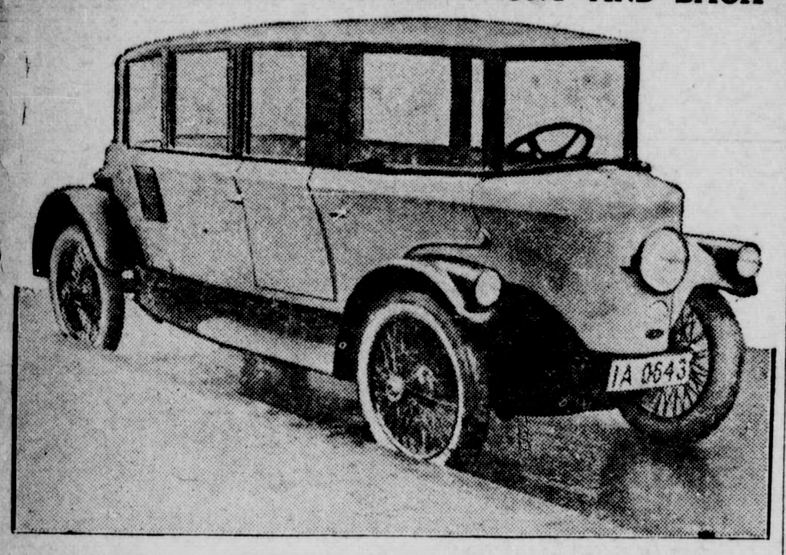
UNIQUE CAR IS POINTED FRONT AND BACK



This new car with its pointed front and back aroused the people's curiosity as it passed through the streets of Berlin, Germany. Many of the people did not know whether it was coming toward them or going away from them.

HONEY SOLUTION NEEDS GOOD CARE

Carefully Boil and Skim Mixture to Prevent It From Foaming.

Three precautions must be taken if honey and water are used as an anti-freezing solution for automobile radiators, say the proponents of this combination at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca.

First, the honey and water must be boiled and skimmed carefully when they are mixed, to avoid the foaming of the solution when it gets hot under usage. Some persons have had trouble from this cause to such an extent that their radiators almost blew up. The mixture, if not rid of its foaming tendency, will expand rapidly when heated.

Keep Gaskets Tight.

Second, all gaskets and joints must be exceedingly tight. The solution is more penetrating than ordinary water, water and alcohol, or any other anti-freezing mixture. If the honey-and-water seeps through into the cylinders, it may make a sticky deposit which will absolutely seal the valves or the pistons so that the engine will not turn over. If the gaskets are all tight, there is no danger from this source.

Keep Radiator Filled.

The final precaution is not to let the solution get low in the radiator. Everyone realizes, say the men who use this solution, that the radiator must be filled with some kind of fluid, but some persons let it get low unthinkingly. With nothing but water in the radiator, the only harm done is in overheating the engine, but if honey with little water in it becomes overheated, the honey will eventually burn, as it is a carbohydrate.

This solution, of course, is used because of its advantages over the common solution which boils away rapidly and at a low temperature. The honey-and-water solution has a boiling point slightly above that of water, and does not freeze sufficiently to burst even the thinnest glass tube at any temperature below zero. The state college of agriculture at Ithaca has a mimeographed bulletin, R 2, giving directions for making such a solution. This bulletin is free on request.

Pay Same Care to Auto as When You Bought It

It is the new member among the motoring fraternity who treats his motor with the greatest respect, especially the starting and lighting battery.

When a man buys his first car he reads all the rules and directions that are given him by the manufacturer. He oils it regularly, he wipes it off every time he uses it and he watches it like a mother bear does her cubs.

The battery is something he cannot look into; it is a complete mystery to him, and he does just as the directions say. He has it tested regularly and carefully watches the ammeter to see that it is getting the right kind of nourishment. He goes along for several months in this manner. The shine begins to grow dull and nothing of a troublesome nature develops and he lets up on his enthusiastic care of the car.

Good Care by Motorist Will Prevent Skidding

The way to stop skidding is to practice skid prevention. It is very difficult to stop a skid after it has occurred, but it is comparatively easy to entirely avoid skidding. Ninety per cent of all skids can be avoided, but in only 10 per cent of these emergencies can the motorist extricate himself after his wheels have started to slide. Chains reduce the chances of skidding, but are not infallible. Keep off car tracks; do not drive fast on snow or on wet pavements. If the car starts to skid, steer in the direction of the skid; not against it. Unless the brakes are equalized skidding is certain to result on wet pavement. Skidding also occurs on wet pavement, especially in snow, when the car is started. To overcome the sideswiping which is common on snow-covered streets, the motorist should start very slowly and in low gear.

Windshield Map Holder Handy for Auto Tourist

The popularity of the strip map for auto tourists makes the holder shown in the illustration a great help. Take a piece of composition wallboard or heavy cardboard a little larger than one strip of your map. Near each corner, at one end, punch a small hole and push a short length of stiff wire through it, bending each end to form a hook. Now get two rubber bands for the ends of the board to hold the map in place. Hang the hooks over the windshield so that the map is always in view of the driver and out of his way.—U. B. Stokes, Denver, Colo., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Motor Cars Have Ousted Camel in Syrian Desert

The conquest of the Syrian desert by the automobile has become a practical and established fact, and this once difficult barrier to trade has been transformed into an important highway of commerce and travel, according to Consul Gregg Fuller in a report to the Department of Commerce from Teheran, Persia. Along the old routes where two years ago only the camel caravans could safely travel, scurrying American motor cars are now making their regular trips from Allepo to Bagdad, from Bagdad to Beirut, from Beirut to Damascus and by-stations with a precision and dispatch that is looked upon as harbinger of a new era of commercial and economic development.

The success of this service has already had an unexpected result of increasing tourist traffic both from India and Europe. By catching a fast boat from Bombay to Basra, it is possible to reach England in 18 days, by way of Bagdad, Haifa and Alexandria. This route commends itself to many travelers from India home, partly on account of the short sea passage, and partly owing to its novelty. By taking the Anatolian railway route from Damascus to Constantinople, it is actually possible to escape the sea altogether from Basra to Calais.

The trip from London to Bagdad can now be completed in seven days instead of 22 to 25 days as formerly. Business men can reach the Persian gulf from Europe in one-third the time previously required. Not only have the desert routes made it easier for the East to reach Europe and the European countries to administer eastern governments, but it has joined more closely together the Moslem world.

Method of Blackening Brass Quickly Is Given

Here is a simple and cheap solution for blackening brasswork in motor cars and one recommended by many automobile owners:

The brass, which should be clean and free from grease, is simply dipped in a boiling solution of water, one gallon; sugar of lead, eight ounces; hyposulphite of soda, eight ounces. The work is allowed to remain in the boiling solution until it turns first blue and then black, which will take about two minutes. The work should then be removed and well washed in hot water and dried.

The deposit consists of sulphite of lead, and can be given a high luster by being polished with a dry brush or a soft leather. To prevent the deposit fading it must be coated with lacquer.

PLANS FOR LEGION MEETING IN PARIS

Arrangements for holding the national convention of the American Legion in Paris, France, in 1927, on the tenth anniversary of the landing of the A. E. F. on French soil, were discussed in detail at national headquarters of the Legion at Indianapolis recently.

Among those participating in the conference were National Commander John R. McQuigg, Commandant Z. Peckoff, official representative of the French government, and John J. Wicker, Jr., and Bowman Elder, member of the American Legion France convention travel committee.

Commandant Peckoff, who was sent from France specially to assist in working out plans for the convention, bore an official letter of invitation from Premier Aristide Briand. The letter read in part:

"American soldiers of the Great war, conquerors of St. Mihiel, St. Quentin and Chateau-Thierry, will be very welcome on this sacred pilgrimage to the tombs of their brothers who died on the field of honor and are buried on French soil. . . . The necessary instructions have been given to the departments of the ministry concerned to study the various questions relative to the transportation of Legionnaires and their stay in France."

Mr. Wicker, who is chairman of the Legion committee arranging for the convention, was informed by Commandant Peckoff that a special bureau has been set up in the French foreign office to handle details of the convention. The commandant described glowingly the welling up of French enthusiasm at the "second coming of the A. E. F."

John J. Wicker, Jr.

According to present plans, the Grand Palais on the Champs Elysees will be leased to the American government for $1 to make it American territory for the time so that the convention may be held in it. A 50 per cent reduction in bus and railroad fares has been granted for groups of Legionnaires from the port of embarkation to Paris and from Paris to the battlefields and cemeteries, according to information received by Chairman Wicker.

Mr. Wicker was told by the commandant that it will be mandatory for Legionnaires and auxiliary members planning to make the trip to make their reservations for the convention four months before the convention. Arrangements, it was explained, cannot be made after that date. French hotels and the city of Paris are co-operating in working out plans for housing the thousands of veterans who are expected to make the trip.

Savings clubs are being formed by Legionnaires all over the country in order to save the money necessary for the pilgrimage. Persons desiring to go must have been bona fide members of the Legion or the Legion auxiliary for both 1926 and 1927.

Post for Artists

The only American Legion post in existence whose membership is limited to artists was formed recently in the Chicago artists' colony. There were more than one hundred members before a charter was applied for. Morres Vickers Liepman, commander of the post, said the post has pledged itself to help disabled veterans who are being trained in commercial art by the veterans' bureau. A clubhouse has been rented where exhibits of post members' work will be held twice a year.

Otherwise Occupied

"If you must whistle," stormed the irate boss, "whistle while I am out to lunch."

"But I can't then, sir," protested the office boy.

"Can't? Why can't you?"

AMONG THE BIRDS

"I can repeat sentences after people, said the parrot in the bird house of the zoo.

A Very Beautiful Cockatoo.

"I have become very tame," said the paroquet.

"So have I," said the cockatoo, a very beautiful white cockatoo.

"Chirp-chirp, peep, peep," said the canaries in chorus, "we have become tame, too.

"We sit on the keeper's fingers and we kiss him and take seeds from his lips, and we sing all the time to show how happy and contented we are.

They sang after they had said this to prove that they were very, very happy.

They were very pretty and bright, gay, yellow in color, and most of them had lovely voices.

"Of course," said the blue solitaire bird, "I am the finest singer.

"I don't like to boast, but that is the truth. The keeper says so.

"But please, dear bird friends," he continued, "don't think I am conceited.

"I only want to show that I like the big bird house here, and that I am very happy—so I prove it by singing and singing my best."

"Your best is very fine," said the Virginia Cardinal bird.

"Thank you, thank you," said the solitaire bird. "Ah, how good the keeper is.

"He knows that when I am free I like fruit and wild berries, and he gives me bits of these here just as I would take them if I were free.

"He gives me delicious little tastes of bananas, too."

"Ah, woe is me, I'm sad," said the Scarlet Tanager bird.

"What's the trouble?" asked the Virginia Cardinal.

"I always lose my gorgeous red coloring in the zoo. I fade and am not nearly so bright and gay and brilliant as I would be if I were free.

"It would appear as though I did not like the zoo. But I do.

"It's just that I must be flying in the big world in all the sunshine and having lots of room and exercise in order to keep my coloring.

"I am not really scarlet any more."

"Oh, yes, you are," said the Virginia Cardinal. "You aren't as scarlet as you were, but you are still very, very lovely."

"Thank you kindly," said the Scarlet Tanager, and then added:

"Well, you're a nice, friendly bird, and the keeper says he loves his dear, tame Virginia Cardinal with his bright and intelligent eyes."

So every bird in the bird house of the zoo felt happy.

But outside, in another bird cage and yard, sat the vultures. They were thinking.

"It doesn't matter," thought the Black Vulture, "what the other vultures think.

"They don't interest me. I like to hunt. I like to eat, and the more awful the meal the better I like it. I will eat the most horrible of food and enjoy it.

The Scarlet Tanager.

"A nice killed chicken I also enjoy among other things. I haven't a silly, fussy appetite."

"Neither have I," thought the King Vulture. He was thinking that he was like the black vulture, only greater, and he was the only vulture that could possibly have been called handsome. He was quite satisfied with himself.

"It is because I am a king," thought King Vulture. "I am a horrible sort of a king of horrible birds, and we fly in the air so we can do our horrible deeds with more ease.

"When people come to the zoo and look at my fine crown I often wish I could say to them: 'Oh, people, you may think I have a bad face, but I am a king vulture just the same.'"

Would Be a Grandpa

Warren is devoted to his daddy, and it was almost more than he could stand when his father went out of town to work. He talked of him continually, and it seemed as though the week-end that daddy should come home would never come.

One day he heaved a great sigh and said: "Oh, dear, I guess daddy will be a grandpa when he comes back."

Just Looked Big

"Johnny," said the father of a precocious five-year-old at the dinner table, "don't you think that is a pretty big piece of cake for a boy of your size?"

"It looks big, papa," replied Johnny, but it's sponge cake and nearly all holes."

Basket Ball as School Sport Meets Approval

Approval of high school basket ball provided players are subjected to thorough physical examination, has been given by 3,000 physicians affiliated with the Indiana State Medical association.

Taking notice of the growth of basket ball as high school sport, since the abolition of football 15 years ago because of numerous fatal injuries, the association adopted a resolution advocating an investigation into the effect of competitive contests upon high school boys. The recent announcement was the result.

Eight hundred Indiana high schools now play basket ball from December until the close of the season with the state tournament in March, and the sport enjoys wider popularity than high school football.

Getting Into Shape for English Channel Swim

Miss Helen Wainwright, the world's champion all-around girl swimmer and diver, has started preparatory work for her attempt to swim the English channel next summer. The star mermaid says that most of her time during her stay at Tampa this winter will be devoted to developing her stamina and resistance for the record trial.

Miss Wainwright was to have attempted the channel crossing last August, but a strained ligament forced her to abandon for the time being and made possible Gertrude Ederle's trip for the attempt. The failure of Miss Ederle to negotiate the hazardous journey has stimulated Miss Wainwright's desire to be the first woman to swim the English channel.

Hornsby Tops .400 Mark for His Third Season

Rogers Hornsby, pilot of the St. Louis Cardinals, has taken his place in the baseball hall of fame as one of a trio of major league stars who, for three years, finished the season with a batting average of about .400.

Hornsby's mark for 1925 was .403, which enabled him to join ranks with Jesse Burkett, famous member of the old Cleveland Nationals, and Tyrus Raymond Cobb, fiery leader of the Tigers.

Hornsby, in 1922, batted .401. In 1924 he established a modern high mark of .423. In 1923, although champion of the National league, he hit only .384.

Burkett made his marks in 1895, 1896 and 1899. Cobb led his league in 1911 and 1912 with a mark above the .400 and finished above this figure in 1922, although not leading the league.

In addition to capturing the 1925 batting honors, Hornsby is the home-run king of the major leagues with 89 circuit blows. He also had the highest total bases mark of .380.

Mathewson and Johnson as Opposing Pitchers

Did you ever know that the late Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson, now the Senators' ace, ever opposed each other as pitchers in a game?

Well, they did, and it was in Joplin, Mo., not long before the World war, which by the way might well have been the "world's series." McGraw and his Giants were touring the "sticks" with a squad playing exhibition games. Joplin is not far from Coffeyville, Kans., and Coffeyville is where Johnson lived. It was agreed that Johnson and Mathewson should oppose each other. McGraw divided his squad of players into two teams, and the Big Train and Big Six went at it.

Each pitcher was allowed to pick his team. They went inning after inning before practically the entire population of Joplin and Coffeyville, with no score. Matty's fade-aways against Walter's speed. It was recorded that Matty finally won by a one-run score.

Giants Obtain Ring in Deal With Philadelphia

The New York Giants have traded Wayland Dean, right-handed pitcher, and Jack Bentley, southpaw, to the Philadelphia Nationals for Jimmy Ring, veteran right hander. No cash was involved.

Dean was one of the leading pitchers of the Louisville club of the American association for three years prior to his purchase by the Giants for $50,000. Bentley was with Baltimore before joining the Giants.

Ring was a member of the Cincinnati team that won the world series in 1919 that resulted in banishment from baseball of several members of the Chicago White Sox team.

Ring won one game for his team during that series. Later he was traded to the Phillies.

KID McCOY FULL OF ODD TRICKS

Resorted to Questionable Means to Win in Ring.

Conceding that nothing succeeds like success, neither does anything flop like a flop.

The stories of Kid McCoy's tricks in the ring are standard classics because he got away with them. He'd point to the floor and exclaim: "Look!" and whale his opponent on the unprotected jaw. The books say that Sullivan whipped some of his patients by outroaring them or glaring them into panic while they were lacing on the gloves.

Here's the other side:

Two champions were down for a no-decision, interclass bout which was to be a polka, with the understanding that if the public liked the number they would take several encores. When the act wore out they would enter the ring for a real fight or shooting match.

The smaller champion decided, however, that the big one was a bunny and made up his mind to throw a fright into him.

"Tell that big bum of yours," he phoned to the big champion's manager, "that I'm going to shoot. He can't fight and I'm going to stop him."

"You're making a mistake," the manager said, "but if you don't want to use blanks, thanks for telling us. We'll shoot, too."

Before the sixth round the little champion had been knocked out.

Another incident:

As large Bill Brennan stood facing Luis Firpo just before the bell began their fight in the Garden, he playfully reached out, plucked a tuft of fur from Luis Angel's chest, held his glove tip up to his face and blew the fuzz into Luis Angel's eyes. It was a very insulting way to treat a Wild Bull.

Then large Bill remarked, "Moo-oo-oo," insinuating that the Wild Bull fought like a Holstein cow.

In the twelfth round large Bill went down so hard that it took two weeks in a hospital to get him in shape to sit up in bed.

The photograph shows Connie Mack, who has just celebrated his sixty-third birthday and who still functions as the very astute and able manager of the Philadelphia Athletics. Although one would like to call him the "Grand Old Man of Baseball," he would probably resent the "old" part, for he's as young as his youngest player on the Shibe park diamond in Philadelphia. He is shown above with the mascot and trade mark of the Athletics.

No Enduring Security in Competing Armaments and Separate Alliances

By VISCOUNT GRAY OF FALLODEN, in "Twenty-five Years."

THE lesson of European history is plain. It is that no enduring security can be found in competing armaments and in separate alliances; there is no security for any power unless it be a security in which its neighbors have an equal share.

All this, it may be objected, is so obvious as to be commonplace—something of which nations must all have been aware for many generations, though they have not acted on it. The fact that, though possessing this knowledge, they have not hitherto acted upon it, is represented as proof that they cannot and will never do so. We are therefore invited to discard such reflections as are made in this chapter as being counsels of perfection, which could be of no use in practical politics.

This line of argument is, in effect, based on the assumption that nations are incapable of learning by experience. There is much in history that supports this view, but the tendency to pessimistic acceptance of it is checked by the reflection that man has, in fact, ascended from savagery to civilization and that this ascent has been possible only because men, individually and collectively, have been capable of learning by experience. The Great war has been the most tremendous experience in the history of civilized man, and the assumption that he has learned nothing from it except to prepare for and to make another war is unreasonable. It is not in accord with his past progress. It can only be true if he has ceased to learn, and, if that be so, he will not only cease to progress, but will dwindle and decay; for he cannot be stationary.

Nothing Done to Study Human Behavior in Relation to Politics

By DR. A. B. HALL, University of Wisconsin.

The two subjects that seem to affect human happiness most vitally are religion and politics, and it is precisely these two subjects that hold out against the scientific method. While there are exceptions, and some of them brilliant, it remains true in general that in these two vast domains of human interest, humanity still approximates the jungle type of civilization. Prejudice, superstition and ignorance still hold sway. Business men spend millions applying the methods of science to the study of human behavior in advertising, in vocational selection and in mental measurement. But nothing is done to study human behavior in relation to politics. Yet what is of most value to society: knowledge of the most effective way to sell laundry soap, or knowledge of how society reacts to political situations? We would seem to regard the soap salesman as contributing more to the advancement of social relations than the political agent. We put our best thought to the selling of soap, but the controlling principle for politics is chance, haphazard experience or the more or less skillful guess of the practical politician.

If Graduate Students of Literature Were Anything but Dull Sheep

By W. L. WERNER, Pennsylvania State College.

Innocent children today are led to believe that the study of literature includes such matters as Carlyle's indigestion, Wordsworth's unfortunate daughter, Poe's liquor and Marlowe's brawlings, as well as pages of dates, volumes of history and libraries of wild surmises. Flooded with misinformation, the poor student finds no time to read and to reread the literature itself.

Such loose thinking is avoided in the other arts, which do not suffer under the blight of collegiate dry rot.

If graduate students of literature were anything but dull sheep one might cry up a revolution. As things are, one can only protest over their dead minds against teachers who lead researching parties down blind alleys after useless lumber.

Impossible for Women to Remain Untouched by This Individualistic Age

By DR. BEATRICE M. HINKLE, in Harper's Magazine.

For ages woman, as an individual creature, has been considered by the masculine mind to be inferior; only as mother did she possess a position and win recognition for herself. Therefore, the mother-woman was the ideal to which all women strove. But this was not woman as individual and differentiated; in this aspect she remained as far from attainment and recognition as ever. But the present age is strongly individualistic, and it is impossible for women to remain untouched by this tendency. Consequently they cannot continue in their own path. Moreover, the need for a new direction and an awakening of their latent potentialities is very great; for if the women remain static and unchanged in their eternal maternal strength, as they are so often told they must, it is certain that the race will remain psychologically unchanged and bound fast to them.

Nervous Systems Must Be Strong to Stand Strain of American Life

By SECRETARY J. J. DAVIS, in "Selective Immigration."

America is a land of high-pressure intensity of life. Our immigrants come from relatively slow-moving, traditionalized cities, towns and villages and drop into a maelstrom of humanity where little is permanent but change, where life is stimulating, dramatic, swift and intense. Nervous systems must be strong to stand the strain of American life, especially its town and city life. . . . Weak minds, unstable nerves, brittle mental stuff crack and break under this pressure. From the certificates of fitness issued by public health physicians our immigration inspectors may believe they are passing in men and women of steel or malleable iron when they are really admitting cast-iron which will not stand the strain.

We Shall Some Day Have Another Visitation of the Influenza Epidemic

By DR. E. O. JORDAN, University of Chicago.

It is now clear that the first estimates of the loss of life caused by the influenza epidemic of 1918 were too low. Recent disclosures make an estimate of 20,000,000 deaths in the whole population of the world probably not wide of the mark. This is comparatively the worst catastrophe of the sort that has visited the human race since the Black Death of the Middle ages. Judging by the past, nothing is more certain than that we shall some day have another visitation of this destructive infection. It is not to be doubted that if it were to descend upon us tomorrow we would, as public-health workers and students of the disease, be little if at all better equipped to deal with it than we were seven years ago.

STATES MUST CHOOSE

Commenting on the fact that the state inheritance tax is retarding development in California, the San Francisco Bulletin quotes the late H. J. Heinz, who at one time figured on establishing a chain of pickle plants in this state. After investigating the tax situation, Mr. Heinz said:

"I am not willing to take all the chances under conditions which make me stand all losses and turn over most of the profits, if any, to the tax collector."

Dr. Millbank Jones, president of the state association for taxation improvement, told a recent convention of real estate men that California and other states are losing heavily through the transfer of citizenship by wealthy people to states like Florida and Alabama, which have no inheritance taxes.

Summing up the situation, the Bulletin says: "Taxes that rob property of its value are fatal to community prosperity, for when capital will not venture, the wage earner is inevitably a more serious loser even than the capitalist."

Every state must choose its own policy in the matter of dealing with wealth and industry. The results of wise or unwise policies are plainly before all who want to see. Capital and industry seeking new locations hesitate to select states where they are to be regulated and taxed beyond reason.

ARTIFICIAL EGGS NEXT

While scientists may never be able to produce a contraption that will take the place of the time-honored hen as a layer of real eggs, they have solved half the problem, so far as practical results are concerned, it is said.

Prof. Bunker of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, announces the successful production of a cheap substitute for the whites of eggs, which he manufactures from beef serum. This new material is designed chiefly for use with other materials in cooking, and for some purposes it may in time become a serious competitor of old Biddy's product.

Enormous quantities of dried whites of eggs are shipped to this country from China for use in the baking industry and in the making of candies, so that if Prof. Bunker's egg substitute fills these requirements it may have considerable commercial value.

But it will hardly cut much of a figure on the breakfast table as a component of the well known and justly celebrated "ham and."

GETTING ROADS FREE

If some recent statistics are true, it appears that the old saying, "you can't eat your cake and have it," has been proven false in one phase of our economic life, at least.

This phenomenon is seen in the building of good roads. It has been pretty conclusively demonstrated that on any highway with an even moderate amount of traffic the cost of a paved road may be saved within a few years through reduced expenditures for vehicles and gasoline.

Owing to the greatly increased cost of tires and the threatened rise in the price of gasoline, this will possibly be true to an even greater degree in the near future.

The device of building roads through the special gasoline tax has met with general acceptance and the indications are that its application will be further extended. In those states where all of the gasoline tax is spent upon the roads there is little complaint. To spend it in any other way is manifestly unfair and discriminatory.

But, however the funds are raised, provided they are judiciously and economically expended, the people come very nearly getting their good roads free in the long run.

ADJUSTED COMPENSATION

Four out of every five World war veterans entitled to adjusted compensation had applied for it up to December 31, when Uncle Sam's largest single clerical job approached completion, State Adjutant James K. Fisk of the American Legion has been informed. Applications received up to January 1, approached 3,000,000, according to Fisk, who has received word from the federal officials at Washington. Approximately 2,700,000 of these applicants were certified by the Veterans' Bureau at Washington as valid. The others were disallowed or were in the process of correction.

Applications came in from eighty-four foreign territories, including China, Armenia, the Cape Verde Islands, Iceland, India, Palestine, Latvia, Cypress, Tahiti, Korea, Burma and San Marino.

The Chicago grand opera singer who filed a petition in bankruptcy had probably been too prodigal with her high notes.

HEALTH CAN BE BOUGHT

Thanks to the advance of medical science, health is now purchasable, according to a distinguished health commissioner. Of course, there are limitations to the extent to which this statement is true, but the fact remains that the possibilities of preventing disease are greatly neglected, through false economy.

By employing well known sanitary measures it is possible for any community to abolish typhoid fever, diphtheria, malaria and other age-old enemies of mankind. Tuberculosis can be largely prevented, and practically every communicable disease can be reduced to a minimum.

A striking example of effective public health work comes from Framingham, Mass., where a campaign was put on at a cost of $2.40 a year for every man, woman and child in the city. As a result the total death rate was reduced by 9 per cent, the infant mortality by 40 per cent, and the tuberculosis death rate by 68 per cent. That $2.40 per capita was most certainly a splendid investment.

Aside from the misery and loss of life that results from a failure to take advantage of scientific health measures, the economic loss is also appalling. The earning capacity of every community is needlessly reduced through preventable sickness. As a business proposition it pays to utilize every possible means for the preservation of the public health, aside from humanitarian considerations.

Much has been done in the direction of better sanitation and the eradication of disease, but not one-half of what can or ought to be done. Within reasonable limits, the people can purchase as much of health as they are willing to pay for. And nothing else worth having can be had at such a low cost.

VETERANS' LOAN ACT

Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan has designated the $20,000,000 Farm and Home Veterans' Loan Act as Number 1 on the November baliot.

Secretary Jordan reserved first place on the ballot for the bond act, which if passed at the coming November election will mean a continuation of the work of the California State Veterans' Welfare Board in the work of placing the veterans of the World war on farms and in homes on a loan basis over a period of years.

George M. Stoutt, secretary of the Veterans' Welfare Board, made the request of Secretary Jordon that the veterans' measure be given the first number on the ballot.

The Farm and Home Loan bond money which was voted by the people of the state in 1922 is practically used up and the new fund will be needed to carry on the work.

Now that the official designation has been made by the Secretary of State, the three hundred odd American Legion Posts of California are to conduct an intensive campaign to get voters to register in each community so that a record vote may be obtained on the bond act sponsored by the ex-service men's organization.

PUNISHMENT OF CRIMINALS

Discussion of crime and the apparent inability to deal with it, has occupied much space in the public prints of late. It may be that the discussion is becoming tiresome to readers. But the continued menace of thugs and killers is even more tiresome, and the public must be awakened to this national menace, says a prominent writer.

Gradually it appears to be dawning upon the straight-thinking portion of the people that while many factors contribute to the prevalence of serious crime, failure to promptly and adequately punish bandits and murderers lies at the root of the whole matter, says the same writer.

Of 205 murderers in Cleveland, but two were sentenced to death. Of 180 in Chicago, only one was hanged. Other cities show a similar shocking condition of affairs.

While it is a terrible thing to take human life, even through legal execution, it is not so terrible as it is to permit innocent perons to be slaughtered at the rate of more than 10,000 a year in the United States.

Until the people shall rise up and demand a reform of criminal procedure in this country, no life is safe.

DEMONSTRATION FORESTS

One of the notable movements in the United States is the setting aside of large tracts of timber to demonstrate the practical value of forestation.

A gift has been made recently to Yale College that is to promote public education in forestry, by training young men in an outdoor school for this purpose.

The same movement providing instruction in forestry operations is being promoted in a number of western states. The purpose is to convince private forest owners of the economic advantages in management of timber lands.

Forwarding the knowledge and practice of economic forestry throughout the country is one of the best outgrowths of the national conservation policy.

States will probably co-operate by eliminating the tax burden on growing timber.

Atlas is no doubt the patron saint of the hold-up men.

Conan Doyle's fantastic story, "The Lost World," which deals with the hair-raising experiences of a party of English explorers who find a lost country where still roam the brontosaurus, pterodactyl, allosaurus, and other dinosaurs, has been booked for the Daly Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This picture, which took more than seven years to screen, is without doubt the most startling in screen history.

A new jazz tune is called "The Muscle Shoals Blues," probably dedicated to Senator Norris.

Suffering from lost memory is getting to be almost as good a defense as going plumb crazy.

Coat-Dress Has Strong Appeal; Smart Party Frocks of Taffeta

WHILE praise of the two-piece dress is being shouted from the housetops of fashionland the aristocratic one-piece tailleur, such as the picture shows, goes quietly and elegantly on in the tenor of its way. In fact, the coat street dress has not lost in prestige. Of course as an exponent of ultrasmartness it must be fashioned of cloth of first quality, displaying correct detailing of collar, cuffs and pockets. Especially this season does the mode exact of the one-piece tailleur that it be of high-grade material and exquisite finesse.

A One-Piece Model.

The one-piece model pictured here answers all the requisites of a patrician type. It is man-tailored of handsome gray luster twill. The front opening buttons so as to accent a cleverly manipulated inverted plait which, while it gives necessary fulness about the hemline, in no way detracts from the slenderized straight-line silhouette. Fashion dictates out-in pockets for the mannish tailleur and here you have them. A charming feminine touch is bespoken in the vestee of flesh-colored satin.

Much might be said in regard to the new vogue for flesh and pale pink colored accessories to the tailored costume. Whereas once we chose white silk, crepe or satin collars, cuffs and vestees, the last word from Paris favors fascinating delicate pink tints.

Returning to the subject of the coat frock, favored materials for its interpretation include first of all hard-finished luster twills, the sort that always look spick and span and seem impervious to effects of dust and lint. The favor for gray in various degrees is amounting almost to a fad. It is said that gray fur neckpieces will be worn with these handsomely tailored one-piece street dresses. Beige also has its adherents.

A very patrician-looking coat-dress, one which will give eminent satisfaction from the standpoint of both utility and arresting appearance, is of covert cloth made in double-breasted fashion, featuring sleeves that full into a wrist band.

In what a capricious mood do we find fashion these days. Especially in the matter of party frocks and formal evening gowns, the mode has gone to extremes. Just as milady has been completely won over to the idea of dresses as narrow, as straight-line and as short as can possibly be, stylists suddenly throw upon the screen billowy full skirts, with bodices which somewhat mold to the figure, the entire ornate with lace flouncings and flower trimmings.

So here we are confronted with a study in contrasts—slender svelte modernistic frocks versus bouffant picturesque period gowns. Stylists invite you to take your choice.

When the imposing robe de style, with its yards and yards of material in the skirt first made its appearance this season it was not taken seriously, but now its acceptance as a reigning mode for evening has become a fact rather than a passing fancy. Another very charming interpretation of the full-skirted mode takes on the quaint expression of the 1830 frocks as well as those of Colonial days.

The lovely taffeta frock shown in the picture is without a doubt a strong argument in favor of the bouffant and the picturesque. The taffeta is changeable, its exquisite rose-lavender tones reflected in the handmade tinted silk flowers which together with beautiful lace adorn this picture frock.

By the way, a taffeta silk vogue is o'erspreading the realm of fashion. Quaint striped and plaided borderings, like grandmother's silks so elegantly flaunted, are very smart. Per example, the slim maiden of today is dancing in adorable frocks made of pastel colored taffeta, such as nile green, rose, lavender or periwinkle blue. These have full skirts which are gathered into almost a normal waistline, with rainbow borderings encircling the hemline. A draped collar, suggesting a fichu is made of the stripes.

Showing the Full-Skirted Mode.

If you would know the value of money, go and try to borrow some; for he that goes a borrowing goes a sorrowing, and indeed so does he who lends to such people, when he goes to get it again.

CODFISH DISHES

Codfish, dry, fresh, or salted is rich in iodine. The lack of this element in our diet is an important cause for enlarged thyroid glands and goiter. To make any common food palatable it is necessary that we vary the manner of serving it.

Codfish Souffle.—Cook one-half of a green pepper and one-half an onion, both chopped, in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix two cupfuls of mashed potatoes with one cupful of cooked flaked codfish, add the well beaten yolks of two eggs and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake in a greased baking dish twenty minutes. To accompany this dish serve string beans, creamed cauliflower or green peas.

Scalloped Codfish.—Prepare one and three-fourths cupfuls of white sauce. Mix one and one-half cupfuls of shredded codfish with seasoning of chopped capers, red and green peppers, add the sauce and arrange in a buttered baking dish, cover with one-half cupful of well buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven until the crumbs are brown.

Codfish en Casserole.—Take one can of tomatoes, two cupfuls of cooked spaghetti or macaroni, one onion sliced, one-half cupful of flaked fish, and one-half cupful of buttered crumbs, adding a bit of cayenne pepper. Simmer the tomato and sliced onion with the seasoning until the onion is tender. In a buttered casserole place a layer of spaghetti, then of fish, one of tomato and finish with buttered crumbs. Bake fifteen minutes.

Codfish Creole.—Cook in three tablespoonfuls of butter, one chopped green pepper, one tablespoonful of pimento, and one onion chopped; when well cooked add three-fourths of a cupful of tomato soup, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of soda, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika, two cupfuls of flaked fish and one cupful of hot milk. Serve piping hot after mixing all the ingredients. Serve on buttered toast or with crackers and cheese.

Codfish With Rice.—Take one cupful of rice or mashed potatoes, one cupful of shredded codfish, four tablespoonfuls of cream, two well-beaten eggs, salt and pepper to season. Mix well and fills well-buttered mold with the mixture, cover with buttered crumbs and bake. Serve with caper or cucumber sauce.

Codfish with drawn butter sauce served with baked potatoes is a dish which is well liked by most codfish lovers. Melt two or three tablespoonfuls of butter, add as much flour and when well blended add enough water (boiling) to make a rather thick sauce. Cook until smooth, add the flaked fish to the sauce and serve.

Satisfying Salads.

We all enjoy a salad and when one is particularly attractive to look at and appetizing to the palate we will add it to our list of good things.

Pear Salad Lucerne.—Drain one can of pears. To the sirup add one and one-half cupfuls of tomato, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, a stalk of celery, two whole cloves, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and boil for three minutes. Rub through a sieve, bring to the boiling point and add two and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin which has been softened in one-fourth cupful of water. Mix well and pour into a shallow mold. Serve on lettuce with one-half of a pear on top of each mold of jelly. Serve with mayonnaise.

Piquant Peach Salad.—Drain the sirup from a can of halved peaches. Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water, add one stick of cinnamon, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and the same of paprika. Bring to the boiling point and add the softened gelatin. Stir until dissolved, strain and add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, place peach halves in bottom of the molds and pour in the gelatin mixture. Serve molded on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Cherry Salad.—Stone large canned cherries and replace the pit with small bits of celery. Mix with stoned, ripe olives and serve with mayonnaise on lettuce. The Royal Ann or white cherries are especially nice for this dish.

Fruit Salad.—Peel and cut into pieces three medium-sized oranges, one cupful of strawberries, three-fourths of a cupful of pineapple, one-half cupful of walnuts. Remove the centers carefully from the thinly sliced oranges. Place three slices on a lettuce leaf. Mix the strawberries, pineapple and nut meats together and heap on a spoonful of the mixture. Sprinkle with French dressing and serve as a dessert with crackers, cheese and black coffee.

Help That Bad Back!

Too Often It's a Warning of Disordered Kidneys

WHY drag around feeling old, worn out and miserable? Why not make up your mind to be well? That daily backache, those sharp, stabbing pains—dizziness, bladder irregularities, nervousness and depression, are signs of kidney inactivity. Use Doan's Pills. Thousands recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

Here Is Convincing Proof:

A California Case

Mrs. S. A. Harris, 741 Elmira St., Pasadena, Calif., says: "My back ached and sharp pains were so severe I could hardly get up or down. Dizzy spells were frequent when tiny specks before my eyes blurred my sight. My kidneys acted irregularly. So I used Doan's Pills and they benefited me."

Thousands of women testify to the truth of this from their own experience.

"But constipation is serious, Grace"

"Not so long ago I was like you—headaches a good deal of the time, sleeping badly, and the least bit of housework tired me out. My complexion too, was bad.

"Finally, I went to see Dr. Farman. He showed me that it was constipation that was back of my troubles. He said that it was a very serious thing because poisons from clogged waste matter were picked up by the blood and carried to every body organ. And if I didn't correct it in time I might become a victim of one of those terrible organic diseases.

"He made me drop laxatives altogether, changed my diet, and put me on Nujol. I don't think I've ever felt better. I sleep well, my headaches have disappeared, and you can see for yourself what an improvement there is in my skin. Nujol has done wonders for me."

Nujol Works Like Nature

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It is neither a food nor a medicine. It does not gripe. It is gentle and natural in its action and is prescribed by leading medical authorities.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly, in accordance with the directions on each bottle. As Nujol is not a laxative, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.
